

We should have a right in our own homes to be free of harrassment. I work 12 to 14 hour days and I am extremely tired of telemarketers calling every hour on the hour. Since I signed up last year the calls have dropped significantly. It is frustrating to be trying to just eat dinner at night (or turning in to bed early) only to be interrupted or waked by someone selling something you do not want. I am beginning to think because citizens do not have the money that the large corporations have; their right to have peace in their own homes is violated. Everything is being done to protect big business and nothing for the working classman. Then the government starts passing laws about debt and doesn't even think that these solicitation are helping to create the problem. It would be one less temptation for someone who can't resist. If someone doesn't mind being called they will not sign up for the list, but if you don't want to be called you should have the right do sign up. Its an unjust burden and it's unfair!!!!!!
